GAVLAK

Mrs. Tependris is not wasting her time while in quarantine. She is amusing herself and us via Konstantine Kakania, who channels her adventures and opinions in his gouache and pencil drawings of her Quarantine Diaries. They are on view at Gavlak Gallery downtown, by appointment, through August

Athens-born Kakania has been chronicling the adventures of his charming alter ego since moving to L.A. in the late '90s. His own background in fashion and world travels led to his creation of this privileged but charming grande dame who now suffers the indignities of social distancing and house-cleaning like the rest of us. She is furious and has written of her complaint to the Covid-19 virus.

"Miss Corona, You little germ. How dare you even present yourself in front of my eyes? I will destroy you, crush you, smash you with my stilettos. If I ever see you back on Park Avenue, I will petrify you, you little shit. What? You say that swearing is not chic? Who are you to talk about anything chic, you viral atrocity. Because of you, I missed my Broadway shows, my Spring couture fitting, my Salzburg Festival, AND the Cannes red carpet... pure horror! Worst of all, I saw my natural hair color for the first time in 30 years. Do you know how traumatic that was? Don't ever come close to me, you filthy creature..."
